

D&R Greenway Land Trust, Princeton, NJ: Call for Entries: Themed Juried Exhibit:
“Farms, Barns, and Bridges”:
October 24 – December 16, 2016, Opening Reception: Friday, November 18, 5:30-7:30pm

CALL FOR ENTRIES – SUBMISSION DEADLINE SEPTEMBER 19

Variations on the themes of farms, barns, and/or bridges are sought for Farms, Barns, and Bridges. Work in any medium and of any size is welcome, including video & sculpture, and can depict any region and be in any style. For more information about the land trust and to submit an entry, please visit <http://bit.ly/2aqWjiy>.

A century ago, our landscape was dominated by farmland, with its rolling hills, patchwork grids of planted rows, silos, barns and covered bridges. As cities began their sprawl, much of this farmland became extinct. Today, the few barns and covered bridges that remain are prized, and repurposed barn wood is coveted by architects and designers. Often, our memories of the rural landscape are preserved by artists who convey these scenes.

Since 1989, D&R Greenway Land Trust has been preserving New Jersey farmland, to ensure bountiful local crops and healthy water. Remarkable landscapes remain to inspire regional artists.

About D&R Greenway Land Trust

D&R Greenway Land Trust is central New Jersey's nonprofit land preservation organization, founded in 1989. We permanently preserve watershed lands and large-scale landscapes, preventing the loss of open space to development.

The arts program at D&R Greenway inspires a conservation ethic through the visual celebration of nature and an accompanying educational component that illustrates the importance of preservation.
